Photography Workshop "Basics"

Seasoned photographer Sandy Horvath helps students master their digital cameras, learning the lenses, settings, and exposures that transform snap shots into high-quality pictures. Beginners work with their own digital cameras to apply the principles behind framing, focusing, and lighting in basic classes. Sandy uses simple explanations to show small classes how to optimize shots on automatic settings or with a manually set aperture value, then sends students out to take a list of photos that demonstrate the techniques and methods to create wonderful looking photos that will surely impress your friends and family. Workshops will be held at SnapShotSandy's office/studio in North Bend or at the beautiful Issaquah Salmon Hatchery.

Introduction to Natural Beekeeping (Treatment free, holistic practices)

Honeybees are fun to keep in the backyard for their honey, pollination, and personal enjoyment. Western Washington and rural King County offer prime honeybee habitat. Sustainable, treatment-free, and holistic beekeeping in the northwest is not only possible, but practical. This class will explore beekeeping basics treatment-free, and holistic beekeeping methods, including top-bar hive, small-cell Langstroth, and foundationless Langstroth hive methodologies. This class is a family-oriented, study of sustainable beekeeping without using medications, treatments or harsh chemicals. It is open to all age levels and is intended to provide new beekeepers everything necessary to plan for and maintain an apiary in the spring. Topics covered include the following:

- Equipment – what you'll need and how to use it, including alternatives to standard Langstroth equipment.
- All about honeybees, their life-cycle, members of the hive, and identifying honeybee ailments.
- Chemical-free management and control of pests and diseases.
- Planning for and managing your own apiary. Placing your hives, installing bees, swarm prevention, and long-term management.

Offered through Snoqualmie Valley Beekeepers, this class is a two-afternoon course in the Meadowbrook Interpretive Center. Fee per family includes the Washington Master Beekeeper's Apprentice booklet. For more information please email bob@combshouse.com
